WIND REACHES FOR THE MARROW

And Gets There, Too, While Women Attend in Summer Gowns.

Fine Programme, However, Is Listened to 145,000 People-President "Passes Hash" at a Quick Lunch.

St. Louis, May 1.—The buildings of the Louisiana Furchase exposition were formally dedicated to their purpose with all possible pomp and ceremony. In every way save one the exercises were a brilliant success-and this one circumstance was the weather. It would be difficult to imagine a more disagreeable day. The wind blew fiercely from the west, sending great clouds of dust whirling into the the other distinguished guests were enfaces of the troops as they marched past the president, and at times so nearly blinding the president that it sands of people occupied an immense was well nigh impossible for him to see across the street upon which the troops were marching.

Temperature Was Penetrating. Added to the discomfort of the wind and dust was a temperature which sought for the marrow, and generally reached it. The ladies who on the strength of the warm weather recently went in summer dresses to the reviewing stand suffered keenly, and but for the thoughtfulness of officers commanding the guard thrown around the reviewing stand, who provided them with blankets, many of them would have been compelled to leave the place. Both President Roosevelt and ex-President Cleveland remained in the reviewing stand exposed to the icy wind until the end of the parade, although their faces were blue and their limbs stiffened by the cold.

Catarrhal Inflections in the Oratory. Conditions in the Liberal Arts building, where the dedication ceremonies proper were held, were little better. There was no wind, but there were manifold drafts which, added to the dampness inseparable from newlyerected buildings, produced a penetrating chill that was uncomfortable to a degree. 'The effect of this was evident in all the speeches, as the speakers, commencing their speeches in clear tones, were without exception given over to catarrhal inflections as they finished. WAS A HASTY CASE OF LUNCH

Foot Ball Tacties Needed to Enable the President to Reach the Board.

Despite this heavy handicap the ceremonies proper were splendidly handled and the programme was carried out to the letter. The crowd present in the grounds numbered in round figures about 145,000. The parade which took place in the morning was somewhat longer in passing before the president than had been expected, but for all that he was but fifteen minutes behind the scheduled time whea he was escorted by the committee into the I.ib- ing building by her at the peril of her be even as early as that he was compelled to take his noon day meal under | house, blowing that building to atoms, somewhat uncomfortable circum-

The food was placed on a rectangular counter and the president, like everybody else, "helped himself." The crowd inside the tent was dense when the president, with secret service men and Adjutant General Corbin acting as "interference" forced his way to the counter. He was so closely pressed that when he attempted to move his arm his elbow disturbed a cup of coffee held by General Corbin. With some difficulty the officers forced the crowd to allow the distinguished guest elbow room, but they would allow him

Owing to his advantageous position the president soon felt called up-on to help out other friends, and be was kept busy passing plates, a service which he performed with alacrity and cheerfulness. Probably 25 per cent. of the people who congested the tent were present merely to witness the chief executive of the nation eating at the democratic level of a cierk in a quick lunch restaurant. Some of the diplomats and a num-ber of other distinguished visitors inted the reviewing stand to find that there were no chairs for them. It developed that the chairs had been cheerfully appropriated by unofficial guests, who had arrived curly on the scene. With somedifficulty other chairs were secured, but they were little used, as the visitors found they could keep off the chill more effectively by

The important ceremonies in the Liberal Arts building were handled with all possible dispatch. Of all the speakers President Roosevelt alone was able to make his voice carry further than fifty feet from the stage. By far the largest part of the assem bly could hear nothing, and it was nearly freezing to death. When the president rose to speak he was cheered to the echo. He bowed again and again, suggesting by his manner that quiet be restored. Finally he mounted the broad railing in front of the rostrum, where he could be seen from tioned for silence, but there was no

Taking advantage of a lull, he called "Now you, my fellow citizens, give me all the chance you can, for I need it." The chance was given and the president began his address. A burst of applause greeted his statement that the Dutch had done great things for the country in its infancy, and the president laughed in a manner which plainly said: "That means my ancestors." The programme of the exercises in the building began with a band concert. The audience was called to order at 2 p. m. and Cardinal Gibbons offered the invocation. President Carter then was introduced as president of the day and the chair sang a grand chorus-"The Heavens Proclaiming." Presentation of the building was then made by President Francis, of the exposition company, and followed by President Roosevelt's dedication address. The chorus, "Unfold, Ye Portals" preceded the address of ex-President Cleveland, who was enthusiastically applauded when he arose and whose speech was frequently cheered. "Amerlea" with chorus and band accompaniment followed, a prayer was said by Bishop Hendrix, and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Pot-

The display was delayed until the appearance of the president, when a great battery of 15-inch aerial moons was exploded in a salute, which was almost deafening.

From this beginning, for nearly two hours the air was a scintillant screen of flashing color. The night was made brilliant with vari-colored lights framed in appropriate devices. The spectacle closed with the printing in letters of fire of the words "Farewell until 1904." The Chinese ambassador was an especially pleased spectator. President Roosevelt remained for some time before leaving for his private car.
